ZL9HR DX'Pedition to Campbell Island operational.

Following two days delay caused by 11 metre swells in the Great Southern Ocean, the team arrived on Campbell Island on Saturday the 1st. of December and were operational using minimum equipment by 05:00 UTC. The following day the full range of masts and antennas were installed and stronger signals off the island were heard worldwide.

Unfortunately the stay cannot be extended so the team will be leaving Campbell Island on Sunday the 9th. of December as planned.

Thanks goes to the New Zealand Department of Conservation as they have now allowed the stations to operate for several hours after sunset where it was expected that all team members would have to return to the ship at sunset.

Logs are being uploaded daily via a satellite phone link but apart from this, communication to the team is very restricted as no cell phone coverage or Internet access is available from the Island. Current log status can be checked to see your contact has been recorded within 24 hours by checking the ZL9HR.COM website. This website also lists the call signs of the various Pilots around the world. Please check their QRZ.COM listings to get their email addresses if you need to contact them.
